February 10, 1946

Dear Students of Monte Cassino:

To pen a line of greetings for your Year Book is a great pleasure because it gives me an opportunity to commend your parents.

That they send you to Monte Cassino where God is honored and informs the curriculum is an earnest of their desire that you be molded along the lines of virtue and decency.

I hope you are absorbing the eternal verities so that as the women of tomorrow, you may glorify His Name.

The vital need of the world is the tie that binds us to God—religion—and you are being taught to keep the lines of communication open to Him for guidance and courage. Prayer is that mode.

With blessings upon you and your zealous Sisters of St. Benedict, I am,

+Eugene J M Guinniv

MASQUERS

"Masquers" gathered informally in their "pent house" headquarters, recently. Taking a respite from rehearsals for private recitals, and their part in the Spring Fete, they paged through the pictures of their production of "Murder in a Nunnery," and took a unanimous vote that it, coupled with their new membership in the National Catholic Theatre Conference, was the outstanding achievement of the year. The Spring Fete and their recitals would make a fitting climax.

So Masquers closes its scrapbook on another year, the fifth active one, in its history. In the hearts of all the members lives the knowledge that "The play is the thing," and that only through the gamut of hardship is any dramatic success attained, for the theatre is of the spirit, and the spirit is God.

Baroness Sliema, Pauline Snyder, says her prayers in the school chapel just before she is murdered.

Verity Goodchild, Betty Atkins, gives a blood-curdling scream as she discovers the murdered Baroness.

MURDER IN THE NUNNERY

At the school switchboard Sergeant Mulligan, Bill Jackson, finds that his effort to get information from efficient Mother Peck, Martha Moroney, and solve a crime in a convent is a trying experience.

Inez Escapado, June Bush, tells her enthralled chums what a simple trick it would be to sneak into the chapel and stab the overbearing Baroness.

Rev. Mother, Patricia Sherry, keeps a watchful eye on Mother Trevor, Donna Maynard, who is suspected of the crime by Inspector Pearson.

Looking for the Baroness' lost will in the grave, Rev. Mother is caught by the amazed Inspector, Sergeant, and Baron.

MURDER IN A NUNNERY

Inspector Pearson, Jim McCormick, and Sgt. Mulligan find themselves in an embarrassing predicament when Rev. Mother comes to the door, and the four frightened girls, who were trying to trace the murderer, hide under their bed.

Verity, who found the corpse, put up a good fight with Inez for her right to the newspaper publicity, while the bewildered reporter, Gloria Durham, tries to stop the battle.

Always looking for a clue, Inspector Pearson questions the grave digger, Mr. Turtle, George Jennings, about his actions on the day of the murder.

The alert Inspector cross-examines Mother Bassonwaite, Peggy Cronk, while Rev. Mother and Sister Carmela, Fannie Marie Clark, serve him tea.

MURDER IN A NUNNERY

Possessive Mrs. Moss, Betty Searle, who dreams of the Baron's, Donald Mooney, childhood days with her, pleads for him to leave Venetia. Jan Braden.

Nuns and students hear the Baron and Mrs. Moss's discussion of the lost will and mysterious murder.

"Getting prettied up, Bill?"

"Oh, for the life of a crewmember!"
